Arthritis series planned at Sinai

Sinai Hospital of Detroit's annual Arthritis Town Hall series will be given on four consecutive Wednesdays beginning at 7:30 p.m. May 15. The May 15, 22 and 29 programs will be in the Zuckerman dining room. Sinai Hospital is located at 6767 West Outer Drive in Detroit.

On May 15, Samuel Indenbaum will discuss the purpose of the series and give an overview of arthritis; how it develops, its many forms, and recent research. Allan M. Smiley and Richard Krugel will speak on medical and surgical approaches used in the treatment of the disease.

On May 22, the difference between good treatment and quack remedies will be discussed by Jerome Rosenthal. Sinai dietitian Wilda McMurry, will address how diet and nutrition can help cope with arthritis.

On May 29, Denise McDonald, director of Sinai's Medical Social Work Department, will tell how arthritis, a chronic illness, affects family relationships, and how coping strategies which include the family are essential in the treatment of arthritis.

On June 5, Karen Lewis, physical therapist, and Pat Gerisch, occupational therapy assistant, will show what physical and occupational therapy can do for arthritis sufferers.

All programs are free and open to the public. Free, lighted parking is available in the Shapero School lot, just west of the main building off Outer Drive.
