Commitment for volunteers is a subject broached with much apprehension. Our society is very cautious when measuring the value of time spent and not monetarily compensated. This caution is earmarked for doom.

From my perspective, a person who volunteers time and skills is committing to excellence. For every experience is adding "value" to nec's being and the person is inadvertently becoming more marketable. Through volunteering, new contacts are enriched.

The time spent provides exercise of one's skills, keeping them fresh and state of the art. Ultimately, one's self-esteem is reinforced and the opportunity for being in the right place at the right time is a value equivalent to monetary compensation.

The other side of the coin is the attitude toward commitment. One must fulfill the roll which has been defined
