Students learn child-care skills

During the first day, the young people talked about the characteristics of a good baby sitter. They also discussed where to find baby-sitting jobs, and how to deal with emergency situations. Other topics covered during the week included infant care, child development and the value of play. Linda Bender, a public health nurse for Oakland County, provided instruction on safety and infant care. Elaine Glasser, a child development specialist with the Cooperative Extension Service in Oakland County, covered child development.
