AAA cites the Hills

Farmington Hills was presented the American Automobile Association's third-place Special Citation for Outstanding Pedestrian Accident Record for being one of the nation's safest cities for pedestrians during recent ceremonies at AAA Michigan offices in Dearborn.

Farmington Hills Mayor Jan Dolan and Police Chief William Dwyer accepted the award on behalf of the city from Robert Cullen, AAA Michigan

Safety and Traffic manager. Farmington Hills earned the award based on an evaluation of its pedestrian and injury rates, rate comparisons, percentage of total traffic deaths and injuries and fatality-free record.

The city, which competed in the 50,000 to 100,000 population group, had no pedestrian fatalities and a pedestrian injury rate of 27 per 100,000 population.
