Sale of arts and crafts

Gail Yurasak (above) and Scott Smith (at right) are two of the 75 artisans who will show and sell their works during Farmington Community Center's 13th annual Juried Arts & Crafts Sale. Show hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday when exhibits will be both indoors and spread throughout the center's grounds on Farmington Road, north of 10 Mile. Participants are asked to use the Ten Mile Community School parking lots on 10 Mile, east of Farmington, and take the shuttle bus service to the site. Admission is 50 cents at the gate.

Feminist to keynote JWF Institute Day

"Looking Inside: Reaching Outside" is the theme of Jewish Welfare Federation (JWF) Women's Division 38th annual Institute Day, set for 9 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24, in Adat Shalom Synagogue.

Noted author and feminist Blu Greenberg will be keynote speaker at the event. She will explore the role of Jewish values and activity as they apply to everyday social and political life. In addition, the program offers four workshop sessions focusing on Jewish and Black concerns; women's rights — the 1985 Nairobi Conference; family and children's issues; and health care law and medical ethics.

The goal of the forum is to address issues of common concern to both the Jewish and general communities in an effort to increase communication and strengthen relationships.

Leon S. Cohan, president of the Jewish Community Council, and Arthur L. Johnson, vice-president of community relations at Wayne State University and a board member of the NAACP, will offer insight into the topic of Jewish and Black concerns.

Women's rights — the 1985 Nairobi Conference will be presented by Edwina Davis, coordinator of the Jewish Educational Loan Service, and researcher and sociologist Shirley Nuss. Upon her return from Nairobi, Nuss received Detroit City Council's award of recognition for her work during the United Nations' Decade for Women. Both women participated in the 1985 conference.

FAMILY and children's issues will be explored by three specialists in the fields of social work, psychotherapy and clinical psychology, sharing insight and information on current problems and solutions will be David Maiseloff, director of the Orchard Children's Services; Elaine Zacks, supervisor of Jewish Family Service and Penny Kennedy, a psychologist with Child Mental Health Services.

Sallyanne Payton, a professor of law at University of Michigan, and Sonia Syme, a teacher and chairman of education for the sisterhood of Temple Israel, will discuss health care law and medical ethics.

The workshop sessions will complement Blu Greenberg's address.

Dulcie Rosenfeld is chairman of Institute Day. Barbara Eisenberg and Jan Hauser are associate chairmen. Nancy Jacobson is vice-president and Sue Marwil is advisor for the event.

For reservations call the Women's Division at Federation, 965-3939.

Staff will attend 2-day conference

The staff of St. Paul's Lutheran School will join more than 6,000 teachers and administrators from Michigan schools affiliated with Christian Schools International, the Missouri Synod Lutheran Church and the Catholic dioceses at a major educational conference Oct. 18-19 in Cobo Hall.

Sponsored by Michigan Association of Non-public Schools (MANS), the two-day conference will center around the theme, "Distinctive . . . for the Common Good." While embodying different backgrounds, the MANS group is unified in its commitment to a faith in God that exemplifies itself in Christian education for children.

In addition to two major addresses, teachers and principals can attend several lectures. Rounding out the educational experience will be a host of workshops and nearly 200 exhibits. The heart of the conference is a desire to energize and motivate those involved in non-public school education. Conference planners hope educators will come away from the conference inspired and rededicated with positive benefits to the whole society.

Folk song concert set

Judy Goldstein, who sings Hebrew, Yiddish and Russian folk songs, will be in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24 in Temple Beth El social hall. Telegraph and 14 Mile Road. The concert is without charge, sponsored by B'nai Brith Harry B. Keldan Lodge.

Goldstein accompanies herself on guitar and supplements her program with a narration to enhance the audience's appreciation and understanding of the music.
