'Come Blow Your Horn' ready for opening

Farmington Hills residents Marshall and Marilyn Piller are two of the featured players in Stage I Productions "Come Blow Your Horn." The early Neil Simon comedy opens Friday and continues on weekends through Nov. 10 in Novi Community Building, 1-96 and Novi Road.

The Pillers take the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Baker, roles they assumed once before when the couple lived in Boston. Both have had on-stage and off-stage experience with community theater

Both have had on-stage and off-stage experience with community theater "just about every place we lived, in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Indinana before coming to Michigan, 'Pitter said. "When we saw the casting call listed in the Observer, we were therefor the open try-outs."

Stage I Productions got started with a small meeting of people interested in heater in 1977 and produced its first play, "Don't Drink the Water" within year. All of the company's plays are put together with those who answer the casting calls, and they come from a dozen surrounding communities.

The six-member cast that make up "Come Blow Your Horn," come from Bloomfield Hills, Birmingham and Westland, as well as Farmington Hills.

Pitter's acting credits include "Oklahoma," "Don't Drink the Water," and "Death of a Satesman." He has directed "A Thousand Clowns" and "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."
His wife has appeared in "Oklahoma," "Little Mary Sunshine" and "Don't Drink the Water," and has assumed many and varied backstage dutles.

Marilyn Pitler (at left) takes the role of Mrs. Baker, Tom Artushin takes the role of Alan, Marshall Pitler plays Mr. Baker and Charles Gale portrays Buddy, in Stage 1 Productions "Come Blow Your
