Media center eyed

Schools are weighing site plans for Eagle

ny Cassy Hans stoff writer

In what chairman James Abernathy termed a "good beginning," preliminary site plans for a long-awated media center at Eagle Elementary were regiewed Tuesday by the Farmington Schools Building and Site Committee. Abernathy requested a more detaigled, enlarged plan showing equipment and furniture placement with total dollar estimates.

Costs for the media center, without equipment and furniture, are projected at $291,000. The center will be funded with money received from the sale of property at 12 Mile and Drake to Little Cargar's International.

That $3-million-plus sale will close before mid-December, according to Michael Flanagan, Farmington Public Schools assistant superintendent of finance. Investment of this money will bring the district $1,000 per day revenue, plus place the Little Cargar's ite on school tax rolls, he said.

Some committee and school board mainbers said the proposed 70- by 49-squire-foot total media center area may not be large enough to accommodate the orthopedic program handled by Eagle, located at 14 Mile and Middlebett in West Bloomified, Preliminary plans detail a large central area, two conference rooms, computer facilities, a gym office and much-needed auditors and the conference of the proposed of the proposed of the plans detail a large central area, two conference rooms, computer facilities, a gym office and much-needed auditors after part as well acenter, in-
