Traditional upbringing is apparent

Dear Lorene Green:
It is impossible for me to resist having my handwriting analyzed. Hopefully it will show an exceptional talent soon to be discovered... in the field of golf. I will be eager to read the results.

W.L.
Livonia

Dear W.L.:

Two things that come quickly to my mind as I study your attractive handwriting are discipline and rhythm. These are valuable traits in golf as well as many other areas of your life. Now, add the vitality and determination that I also find and Jan Stephenson better be careful!

A traditional upbringing where a sense of responsibility was impressed upon you early in life is evident. Your home and family are closely connected to your happiness. And a flair for the attractive probably has your home looking lovely at all times. You live by the cliché "A place for everything and everything in its proper place."

A genteel lady with a nature that is caring and a heart that is sympathetic is obvious. Culture and self-improvement are interests of yours. And you enjoy a good discussion. Your emotions run deep and are long lasting. Past feelings of having been taken advantage of cause you to have your guard up so that it will not happen again. You are most comfortable with the tried and true. Security is important and you are not going to jeopardize it. Responsibility is handled well. A good sense or organization is yours. Pride is evident in all you do. And you are conscientious, methodical and efficient as you strive for perfection. You are not afraid of hard work. Nothing less than your best effort would pass your own standards.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed through this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist.
