Large letters show a need for recognition

Dear Lorene:

I am fascinated by the study of graphology. I have attended one lecture on the subject and would like to learn more. At this stage of my life I have a great deal of interest in self-improvement and a quest for understanding myself. Discovering what "makes people tick" is fascinating.

On a personal level I am a third grade teacher, married and no children. Thanks for analyzing my handwriting through this newspaper. M.B. Farmington Hills

Dear M.B.:

Graphology is indeed a wonderful tool for helping one better understand herself. I am happy for your interest.

Your own handwriting, so dissimilar to copybook style, does not suggest a third grade teacher to me. I have to think you have another style which you use when teaching, right?

Life is to be lived! The large size and fullness of your handwriting tell me you are a woman who is ambitious for recognition and acceptance. A busy lifestyle with a wide variety of activities probably suits you to the proverbial "L." You really enjoy being part of the action. In fact, you may even be overly involved at this time.

Both mental and physical challenges are stimulating for you. Vitality and strong persistence are assets which help you accomplish all you wish to do. (Tied t bars with good pressure and long lower loops).

You are a bright young woman. Keen comprehension allows you to grasp ideas and situation easily. Creativity is also part of the thinking. No one needs to draw pictures or provide lengthy explanations for you.

There is a dramatic flare about all you do. When this is coupled with your gift of words and fertile imagination, I can visualize your students sitting in apt attention at storytime. This could probably be harnessed into creative writing also. Those g's that resemble figure 8's and stick 1's in cursive writing strongly suggest literary aptitude. And the printed s's tell me of your interest in reading.

The vivid imagination makes life interesting not only for you, but for those around you as well. A tendency to get carried away without even realizing it may also be part of your style.

Money and the material things it provides to make daily living more enjoyable are high on your priority list. It seems quite possible an interest in possessions started very early in life. Were material things sometimes substituted for love?

People of all persuasions can find a friend in you. An open-mindedness does not permit you to condemn things which may not be in harmony with your own personal views. And your intuition should be helpful in relationships with others.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed through this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper writing in the first person singular. Age, signature and handedness are also helpful.
