

LIT continues spirit and tradition of closed college

Lawrence Institute of Technology will establish an endowed faculty chair in manufacturing engineering, naming it in honor of the Detroit Institute of Technology, which closed in 1981 after several years of declining enrollment. LIT is also re-establishing full alumni programs for DIT graduates and is the depository for DIT student transcripts. LIT and DIT were not previously affiliated, but similar technologically based academic programs were offered at both private institutions, and they shared a close relationship with the industrial community.

"We are very pleased to memorialize DIT's distinguished record of educational service, dating back to 1891, through establishment of this faculty chair," said Richard Marburger, LIT president and chairman of the 6,200-student college's board of trustees.

"We plan to attract and support a nationally recognized scholar in manufacturing engineering on this campus and also to enhance our efforts to attract qualified minority students to LIT."

LIT also will begin a full service alumni program for DIT graduates and is asking them to register with LIT's Alumni Office because address records from DIT are not current.

Manufacturing engineering, focus of the DIT faculty chair at Lawrence Tech, involves students in assembly and production technology, including robotics, computer-aided engineering, and computer integrated manufacturing, said Robert Ellis, dean of LIT's school of engineering.

Ellis was president of DIT when a similar program was initiated there. It was a major element of DIT's academic program prior to its closing and was planned with the assistance of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Lawrence Institute of Technology is Michigan's largest private undergraduate college. It offers a variety of day and evening programs in engineering, architecture, management, and arts and sciences, as well as evening associate programs in science and engineering technologies. LIT's 90-acre campus is in Southfield.

Long t bars suggest enthusiasm

Dear Ms. Green:

I am left-handed and 40 years old. I used to be so proud of my penmanship, thinking that it was exceptional for a left-handed person. However, in recent years I have noticed that it is no longer so neat and attractive and sometimes isn't especially legible. My handwriting has definitely changed over the years.

I am very interested in what you might have to say regarding my personality and its relationship to my handwriting. I am not sure that I believe there is a connection between the two, but I guess I must have some trust in the idea, or I wouldn't be writing to you!

store for you. Some restlessness has you seeking diversion and variety in your daily living. At this time you appear to be very busy and possibly overly involved.

Outwardly you present a picture of poise and control. When facing decisions, you take time to consider how it will affect you personally.

B.M.
Plymouth

Dear B.M.:

Your creative handwriting and your doubts about graphology were both factors which influenced my choice of letters this week. Hope this analysis makes you a believer. I would be interested in your objective comments.

You are a woman who wishes to experience all you can of what life has in

You are not inclined to share your inner feelings with others. (Vertical slant and controlled left margin.)

You are an independent woman. And probably became that way at an early age. You have stepped aside from traditional ways into a lifestyle that is more satisfying to you. From the formative years it was the male influence who showed you the need to get out into the world and make your own way.

You are creative and self-reliant. Can get right down to the essentials without wasting time on things that are unimportant to you. You do not need anyone to prod and push you into action. However, you were either tired or depressed when you wrote this letter.

What a delightful person this handwriting reveals. There is a contagious enthusiasm about you most of the time. And when this is coupled with your highly developed imagination, you can become carried away by all you see and hear. Some tendency to embellish probably happens without you even being aware. (Long t bars and wide lower loops)

Praise you enjoy. But criticism can be devastating, often causing you to become defensive. Have you considered that you may expect criticism when none is intended.

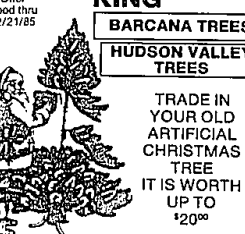

High on your priority list is money and what it will provide for you. A tad of humor enables you to appreciate the lighter side of life. And an awareness of the beauty around you is also part of your nature.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed through this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper writing in the first person singular. Age, signature and handedness are all helpful.

ice O Your hometown voice O

We can put all of this to work for you.

You're looking through a fish-eye lens at our 150-ton Goss Metro offset printing press. A lot of people think that the only thing that rolls off this three-story machine is their hometown newspaper. Not true.

Our commercial printing operation keeps this press and two others busy with all sorts of publications; other well-known newspapers, newsletters, advertising circulars and schedules.

We print these on newsprint or white offset stock in four color, spot color or black and white. We also have everything it takes to set your type, keyline your pages, and deliver your finished product.

We emphasize service and eliminate aggravation.

Bob Prokop is our Commercial Printing Representative. If you need printing, call him today.
