

Athlete of Year, 1B

They keep an eye on our sky, 3A

Farmington Observer

Volume 14 Number 72

Farmington, Michigan

Twenty-Five Cents

ure story idea or an action pic-ure with a Farmington area onnection, send a note connection, send a note to our downtown office at 33203 Grand River, Farmington 48024.

TAKE note.
Farmington Hills City Hall's Telecommunications Device for the Deaf (TDD) telephone number has been changed. Previously 474-6306, the new number is 473-9583.
TDDs ald hearing and speech impaired individuals in gaining information. By communicating through a keyboard, much like a typewriter, individuals ask typewritten questions and receive information in the same manner.

manner.
All hearing and speech impaired people in the Farmington Hills area may use the TDD for information egarding city services and programs.

SENIORS at least 60 can take advantage of the Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency's school cilizen discount program.

Pictures for identification cards will be taken from 10 a.m. to 3 pm. Friday, July 18, at the Farmington Senlor Center at Mercy Center, 2800 11 Mile, Farmington Hills.

110 cards enable seniors to take advantage of discounts offered by local merchants.

Discounts range from 4 to 40 percent.

HELP is needed. The Farmington Youth

THELF IS RECEASE
The Farmington Youth Assistance-sponsored Teen Center at Shawassee School has more teens participating each night than originally expected.
The FYA board of directors,
which budgeted for the number of teens who participated last year, is concerned that money might run out before the end of the eight week program.
FYA will accept donations from area organizations. If interested, call the FYA office at 476-3840.

IT'S business mixer time.
The Farmington/Farmington Hills Chamber of Commerce will join the Livonia Chamber of Commerce for a business
after hours mixer 5-7 p.m.
Thursday, July 10, at the Bodsford Inn, Farmington Hills.
Exchange business cards,
cultivate new sources and enjoy hors d'ocuvres. Call the chamber for reservations: 4743440.

ROADS will command the spotlight at two Farmington Hills City Council public hearings in July:

A hearing at 7:30 p.m. Monday, July 14, will determine whether to proceed with the proposed paving of Goldsmith. The results of a recent petitioning effort show that more than 51 percent of the residents favor paving. Construction would not begin until carly 1873 although engineering work could be done this winter.

Two hearings are slated for 7:30 p.m. Monday, July 21. The first is a cost hearing for paving 13 Mille, Drake to Institute of the first in a cost hearing for paving 13 Mille, Drake to Institute of The Fall of The Fall of The Fall of The Fall of The State of The Fall of The State of The Fall of The F resurfacing proposal.

FOOTNOTES: Did you know Grand River used to be called the Detroit-Howell Plank Road because it served as a stagecoach route from Detroit to Lansing?

Corps work: 'best days'

By Susan Steinmueller stall writer

staft writer

When Joe Polluto prepared to graduate from Calumot High School in the Upper Peninsula in 1933, the future looked bleak.

The Depression had put nearly everyone out of work, and the mining industry, which was the bread and butter of most everyone in his hometown of Calumet, had closed down.

hometown of Calumet, had closed down.

But hope for Polluto and other young men like him between the ages of 17 and 21 arrived in the form of a program established in 1933 called the Civilian Conserva-tion Corps. A federal "make work" program, it was aimed at putting young men to work on environmen-tal projects.

young men to work on environmental projects.

In projects that Poliuto spent with The young near Civilian Conservation Corps made what could have been the worst of times into what he called the best days of his life.

"Every CCC bay that went will tell you that those were the best days of their life," said Poliuto, now 73 and a retired heavy equipment operator who lives in Farmington Hills. "The CCC made men out of all the boys, and they're all proud of it too."

THE ENTHUSIASM with which alumni CCC groups have recently seen from the "old boys" proves that Poliuto is not alone in his fond that Poljuto is not alone in his fond memories.

"The boys in the CCC camps want to get together," said Polluto.
"There are such happy memories."
When the CCC was organized, almost 18 percent of Michigan's work force, which numbered two million, was out of work. The program provided young men like Poliuto with an opportunity to work and learn new skills, to eat three square meals a day, and to get paid $30 a month — $25 of which was sent directly home.

In return, the young men — to-

In return, the young men — to-taling 100,000 at 120 camps when the program disbanded in 1942 —

Joe Poliuto is shown holding a program from a dance spon-sored by the city of Manistique for members of Camp 3832 of the Civilian Conservation Corps. The dance was given by the city as a farewell tribute when the camp moved to Newberry in 1937. The jacket Poliuto is wearing was issued by the CCC as a work fatigue. The photographs are some Poliuto took during his days in the CCC.

people

planted millions of trees, built fish batcheries, cleared roads and made hatcheries, cleared roads and made bridges.

Their legacy included 5,600 miles of roads, 500 bridges, 200 buildings and 33 airplane landing strips. They also fought forest fires, treated land for diseases and insects and began clearing state park and piente areas.

FROM 8 A.M. until 4:30 p.m., the men worked for the Department of Natural Resources, Poliuto said. From 4:30 p.m. until 8 a.m., they were subject to the same discipline and procedures as those in the Army, with the camp under the supervision of reserve Army officers.

Poliuto reported to work in July 1933 to Camp Newberry, which was still being established. An av-erage of 230 young men served at each camp, most of which were in the upper half of the state.

Polluto know that the money he would send home would help support his family. His father, an Italian immigrant, was a timber boss at the mines in the Calumet area. He was the oldest of three children, and has a younger brother and sister.

Please turn to Page 8

City leaders laud liability law reforms

Both Farmington City Manager Robert Deadman and Farmington Hills City Manager William Costick are a considered from the state Legislands of the state of liability reforms that, in the long form, could help reduce Insurance premiums for the cities. In mid-June, the state Senate followed the House's lead in passage of a package of seven liability and tort reform bills after a full year of debate. The push for reforms was spurred by searing liability Insurance rates, including those paid by municipalities.

ance rates, including those paid by municipalities.

The key bill for municipalities immis a government as a "deep coket" source.

The change is pelasted with the changes, especially the case of joint and several liability. That's really important. Because government as seen as having a real deep pocket."

The change in joint and several il-ment is seen as having a real deep pocket."

The change in joint and several itability most likely will reduce a muncipalities' costs simply because they would no longer be 100 percent financially responsible when other parties in a lawsuit are not financially collectible.

"In the long run, we hope premiums will be reduced. Yet, we don't know how the courts will interpret these changes," said Gene Berrodin, Milchigan Muncipal League's insurance director.

THOUGH PLEASED with the change in joint and several liability. Berrodin called the reform a compromise. Under the Legislature's liability reforms, a municipality would pay its percentage of fault, plus an amount equal to its share if other parties are uncollectible. Although municipalities are still going to have to pay if other parties are uncollectible at least it is not as much as in the past, Berrodin said.

Calling joint and several liability 'rideulous,' Costick said, he is un-certain whether reforms will have an impact on municipal insurance preminums. "I certainly would hope so. But that's yet to be seen.
"The cities have had such a bad experience in recent years, it's hard to say what is going to happen in the short term."

Farmington and Farmington Hills are insured through the Michigan Municipal -Risk Management Au-

Lengthy ballot is possible

Michigan voters could see as many as seven proposals on the Nov. 4 ballot.

many as seven proposals on the Nov.

Today at 4 p.m. is the deadline to file initiative petitions in Lansing for ballot proposals. Three groups are confident they, have enough signatures for their pet projects — the death penalty, a part-time legislature and stiffer utility regulations. The wine cooler deposit initiative fell short of its signature requirement but could be placed on the ballot by the Legislature.

Three constitutional amendments are certain of ballot status because they were approved by the Michigan Legislature.

HERE IS the status of petition drives just prior to the Fourth of July holiday:

• Death penalty — Some 304,000 signatures are needed, and 340,000 have been collected with an expectation that 10,000 more will come in by noon today. Oakland County Pro-

Please turn to Page 9

Schools facing changes

This is the first of four parts examining task force reports re-cently presented to the Farming-ton Board of Education, This part looks at the district's physical re-sources.

By Casey Hans stall writer

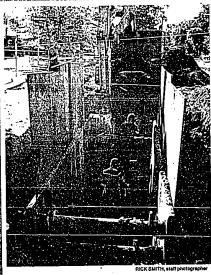

As Farmington sch-1 officials face a future of linanci... uncertainty due to proposed state equalization, it is also faced with the expense of major structural publidings.

A nine-member task force committee, charged with studying the district's physical aceds and comprised of school employees and local residents, recently told the school board the structural solutions might be costly, but will be necessary.

"The duction of the district's arry.

"Out of necessity, the district's funds have been spent conservative by on physical structures," the committee's 22-page study report said.

"The educational process, which contains the necessary ingredients of staff and curriculum development.

Farmington Department of Public Services workers began work Thursday on repair of a sower line break on Shlawassee Road west of Inkater Road.

Break is repaired

A portion of Shiawassee Road was closed for several days last week, while repairs were made to an interceptor sewer line that broke under the road.

Interceptor sewer line that the several days last week, while repairs were line that the services repeated 40-50 feet of sewer line was of Inkster to repair the break, spotted by using the city's new sewer camera, according to City Manager Robert Deadman. The camera is remotely sent along the sewer line to determine a problem.

A sewerage back-up was noticed in at least one basement in the Floral Park subdivision in Farmington during the city's last beavy rain, prompting the city to take action.

The top of a 21-inch sewer pipe joint broke, causing the pipe to fail book cight inches and restricting the flow of sewerage along the city of Detroit water main several foct away from the sewer line had to be reinforced with steet sheeking while the crew did repairs, Deadman added, It took 1th days to set up a secondary line to pump sewerage in a 24-block area around the break.

The interceptor sewer line, built break.

The interceptor sewer line, built in 1983, runs from Farmington's primary storage treatment facility in the city to a treatment center in Detroit.

what's inside

Around Farmington 4B
ClassifiedsSections C,D
Crossword puzzle 5C
Entertainment 6B
Obituaries 6A
On the agenda6A
Police/fire calls 10A
Shopping Cart 1-2C
Short takes 3A
Sports 1-2B.
Suburban life 3-4B
News line 477-5450
Sports line 591-2300
Home delivery591-0500
Classified ads591-0900

The CLASSIFIEDS

Classified makes good dollars and sense. Get the most for your money-buy or sell classified.

591-0900

