Hills slates spring tree sale

The Farmington Hills Beautification Commission has scheduled an annual spring tree sale, revolving between Arbor Week and May Day. It promotes planting, landscape improvements and general appearance. The tree sale is an excellent starting point toward these goals for the spring season, according to the commission.

Aimed at inspiring area residents to conduct their own planting, a host of shade, ornamental and evergreen trees, all proven successful in Farmington Hills' soil, are offered:

SHADE TREES
Emerald Queen Maple. A rapid grower with good branching habits. The Emerald Queen Maple sports attractive glossy green foliage in the spring and summer and a bright yellow color in the fall. At maturity, the Emerald Queen Maple reaches an average height of 35-50 feet.

Red Sunset Maple. At mid-season for two weeks, the Red Sunset Maple reaches an outstanding orange-red color, which is most attractive against its silvery gray bark. Maturing to an average height of 35-50 feet, this tree grows upright and spreads to an oval shape.

Marshall's Ash. A very hardy, rapid grower, the Marshall's Ash is successful in heavy clay soil and is known for its beautiful, bright lemon-yellow color in the fall. A height of 55 feet is reached at maturity.

Green Leaf Locust. Maturing to 30-40 feet in height, the Green Leaf Locust is successful in both shady and heavy clay soil.

EVERGREEN TREES
Austrian Pine. With dark green, stiff needles the Austrian Pine has an excellent tolerance to drought, salt and clay soil. Reaching a height of 35-50 feet at maturity, the Austrian Pine also grows successfully in sandy soil.

Colorado Spruce. Known for its excellent tolerance to both soil and climate, the Colorado Spruce sports three quarter to 1 1/4-inch stiff needles and reaches a height of 30-60 feet at maturity.

ORNAMENTAL TREES
Selkirk Crab. Maturing to an average height of 25 feet, the Selkirk Crab grows in a vase shape, has rose red flowers and glossy purple fruit.

Royalty Crab. With dark red fruit, purple leaves and crimson-purple flowers, the Royalty Crab reaches a height of 15 feet at maturity.

Zumi Crab. Sporting a rounded dense top, pink buds that open to white flowers and orange-red fruit, the Zumi Crab matures to a height of 15-20 feet.

Purple Leaf Sand Cherry Tree Form. Dainty white flowers and rich purple red foliage describes the Purple Leaf Sand, which matures to a height of 8-10 feet.

Washington Hawthorne. With low-growing foliage, the Washington Hawthorne is dense and grows upright. In the fall it produces red fruit and the foliage becomes gold, orange and red. Maturing to a height of 25-30 feet, the Washington Hawthorne boasts white flowers in the spring.

Mountain Ash. Requiring well-drained soil, the Mountain Ash sports small compound leaves, white blossoms and orange-vermillion fruit. The Mountain Ash grows to 40 feet at maturity.
