

Volunteer honored

Dolores F. Carey has been named Farmington Community Center's Volunteer of the Month.

An active volunteer for the past two years, Carey has participated in the center's arts and crafts shows, the Santa Claus luncheons and snowman contests. She also has served the center by doing clerical work and mailings and working at the reception desk and in Originals Ltd., the center's fine gifts shop. She is also a member of the center's Women's Club.

"My family has lived in the area for 55 years and we have enjoyed many activities in the center. It is a place to teach and to learn, to help and be helped," she said.

Her interests include writing, flower arranging and psychology.

Fans gather

Joan Rivers drew fans, autograph seekers and the curious who filled I Browns late last week to exchange jokes and chat. The Farmington Hills bookstore was a stop on the comedienne's tour to publicize her autobiography, "Enter Talking." Book patron Pat Lee (above left) gets a Joan Rivers autograph.

Artisans can show and sell

Area artists and crafters are invited to show and sell their work in an Arts & Crafts Show, scheduled for July 11-12 in Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, 28000 New Market.

Applications will be sent on request by calling Ginny Morris, 553-4082, during the day, or Krys Welke, 348-7179, during the evening.

Groundbreaking set at Cloverdale

After a year of fund raising, Cloverdale Training Center's staff will break ground for its new custom-made playground at 1 p.m. Tuesday, June 24. Money to build the playground for the center's students has come from a host of area residents and groups.

The latest check to be received, in the amount of $3,661, came from students at North Farmington High School who raised the money with a volleyball marathon.

The check was presented to Doug Smith, supervisor of Special Educational Services, by Brad Char, president of the student council, Bill Brinker, the school faculty adviser, and Don Cowan, North's principal.

Students cited as the prime movers in the marathon were Kim Young, Jennifer Rowe, Lisa LaGuardia, Stacy Sukokus, John Barwick, Scott Stern, Janet Payne, Linda Mann and Rocky Patel.

Historical festival set

Plymouth's annual "Dearly, Do You Remember When?" festival will run from noon to 8 p.m. in the city's Historical Old Village.

The schedule for the day includes a potpourri of antiques, arts and crafts, food, games, old-fashioned contests, sidewalk sales, music and entertainment.

Best of all, say festival promoters, is the old-fashioned prices.
