

Style reflects willingness to

Dear Lorene:
I have followed your column with great interest for 4 to 5 years now. I've often thought of writing you to have my handwriting analyzed. Now that I'm going in for hand surgery I'm not going to procrastinate any longer.

-- I will be watching very eagerly for your analysis to learn more about myself and if your thoughts are the same as I see myself.

Thanks for your time and endeavors.

M.D.

Dear M.D.:

A woman who likes to experience all that life has to offer quickly comes to mind as I study the total picture of your handwriting with its large size and absence of margins. Freedom of movement is important.

A wide range of interests are yours. And you have been exposed to some of the finer things and continue to seek ways to improve yourself.

A highly developed sense of humor is the next thing that comes into focus. You have a liking for laughter and can appreciate the funny or amusing. Humor is a valuable commodity which provides spice and savor in your interpersonal relationship. People are important to your happiness. Some tendency to argue may be a bit of a problem at times in relating smoothly.

Those lines of writing which slope upward attest to your optimistic outlook. You probably see the doughnut, not the hole.

Security is important and causes you to lean toward conservatism.

Still you need recognition and acceptance from others and behavior is often monitored so that you will obtain it. And while you like to do things on a grand scale, some self-consciousness keeps you from seeking center stage frequently.

Determination and inner strength are evident throughout your handwriting. You do not give up easily once you embark upon a task or challenge. Most of your goals are at a practical level of attainment.

While you sometimes look at others with envy, a competitive spirit drives you to work for success. You are able to see the broad scope as well as the details. And those around you recognize your dependability and ability to follow through on the job.

Hurts from the past have a way of staying with you. To forgive and forget is not easy as you keep recalling them. This has a way of eroding emotional energy.

Seemingly, someone is attempting to tell you something, but you are closing a deaf ear to the message. Perhaps you choose not to face it at this time.

Good luck on your hand surgery.

As a reader of this newspaper, readers are invited to have their handwriting analyzed. Write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper, 35251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. And feedback is always welcome.

Even retirees have role models

KITTY, A PERSONABLE and efficient educator, was thanking some retired volunteers who had helped with a special project in the high schools of our community.

The project involved working with bright kids in academic games. The volunteers found it so enjoyable they didn't really need to be thanked.

"We couldn't do it without you," Kitty said. "There's no way we could find enough school personnel to take the time to run the games and keep them fair."

"But I've been thinking about another reason your help and presence is especially appreciated, by the kids and by those of us at the teaching and administrative level."

THEN KITTY started talking about role models, though I don't remember her using the term.

the road. How will I be if I can't, don't want to, walk to the beach every day? Or swim, or run around on as many projects? How will I be when the years add the inevitable problems? Will I still be interested and interesting?

I HAVE all sorts of positive role models now. There's an 80-year-old friend who did the driving on a recent trip to Tallahassee. There's my hotel roommate on that trip, so much fun and so energetic I couldn't believe she was 78.

To say nothing of a 90-year-old woman who managed and enjoyed a day-long boat trip, and many friends who have celebrated 50th wedding anniversaries and are still going strong.

All I can hope is that they're showing me some answers.

Graduated

Two Farmington Hills students were among the graduates when the Adventure School held its fifth commencement exercises.

Adrienne Lenhoff and Michael Stern took their diplomas from the private school in Birmingham.

Clarification

Louise Coleman was named "Super Star of the Year" by Farmington Area Jaycees.

It was erroneously printed that she was given the "Woman of the Year" award by the now-disbanded Farmington Area Jaycees Women.

Coleman is president of Farmington Area Jaycees and will preside over projects and activities planned for the service organization's 40th anniversary year.

Knights install commander

Richard Webb, a Farmington Hills resident and Grand Commander of Farmington Lodge 151 of Free and Accepted Masons, was elected and installed as the Right Eminent Grand Commander of Knights Templar of Michigan at the conclusion of the 138th annual Grand Conclave in Flint. Knights Templar is the top-ranking Christian Order of Free and Accepted Masons. Founded in Jerusalem, Knights Templar have gained national recognition in the U.S. for their philanthropic pursuits.

Knights Templar Eye Foundation, established in 1957, has provided $20 million for surgical treatment and hospitalization for the needy blind and sight-impaired. It has also provided more than $55 million in low-interest loans to needy college and technical school students, as well as a now 11-year-old program which sends Christian ministers to study in the Holy Land.

Webb has already arranged to have the 131st Grand Conclave in the Farmington area. Scheduled for June 4-6, 1987, the conclave will conclude with an all-Masonic parade down Grand River in downtown Farmington.

Damascus Commandery 42 will host a testimonial dinner for Webb at 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 7, in the Novi Hilton. Inquiries about the dinner will be taken by Charles Cone, in Northville, 477-3825.
