NAVY PORTS — By a vote of 240 for and 191 against, the House adopted an amendment that blocks funding for the Navy plan to base its growing fleet at 19 or more Atlantic, Pacific and Guil Coast ports.

Critics said the "home-porting" plan is designed in part to attract broad geographical support in Congress for Navy spending, while defenders say it is dangerous to concentrate the planned 500-vessel Navy in too few ports.

This amondment was attached to the fiscal 1967 military construction appropriations bill (RH 5052) which had the conference of the control of the control

Amendment sponsor Dennis Her-tel, D-Mich, sald "it makes no sense" to base Navy vessels at Sta-ten Island because "New York City is the top target in the nuclear age." Opponent Norman Dicks, D-Wash.,

eventually will see "that the budget numbers are fudged" and that deficit spending remains untarned by Con-said the Navy fleet must be dispersed "so that in case of a Savict attack... all of our ships would not be in one place. That is the lesson that we learned from Pearl Harbor." Members voting yes wanted to de-lete the proposed $140 million home-porting outlay. Voting yes: Purrell, Hertel, Willam Ford, Levin, Broom-field.

NUTRITION PROGRAM — By a vote of 305 for and 85 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2436) creating a sweeping new federal program to upgrade America's eating habits and food nollcies.

America's eating habits and food policies.
At an estimate cost of $70 million or more over 10 years, the National Nutrition Monitoring and Research Program would tie logether a variety of existing federal programs that deal with what and how well Americans eat. And it would aid programs, such as categorical grants for state and local nutrition projects.
A key aim of the bill is to coordinate the departments of Agriculture and Health an Human Services, two agencies whose food and nutrition programs often have been in conflict.

Supporter Manuel Lujan, R.N.M., Said the legislation "will not solve the problem of hunger in the United Copponent Joe Barton, R.Texas, said the bill "is not bad legislation" but is unwarranted at a time of Federal nusterity.

Red Cross blood supplies run short

A critical shortage of blood, espe-cially type O, has the local American Red Cross Blood Services worried. Unless blood donations increase Unless blood donations increase significantly over the next week, bespitals will be asked to postpone elective surgery until the blood supply improves.

Asking hospitals to postpone electives surgery is the last option the local Red Cross will use in an effort to ensure that emergency blood needs can be met.

The long July 4 hollday weekend made a bad situation even worse. No blood was collected on July 4, and only 202 units were collected over the hollday weekend.

BLOOD DONOR centers of the Red Cross in Oakland County are located at 2385 Franklin Road, Bloomfield Township, and 2390 Green-field, Oak Park. All centers have evening and weekend hours.

Appointments to donate blood can be made by calling 494-2800 or toll-free 1-800-552-5466. Red Cross said to appreciate appointments but also welcomes walk-in donors.

Blood donations started to decline in early June. Donations since then have averaged about 725 per day rather than the 950 to 1,000 units needed to meet the needs of area hospitals. Red Cross blood regions across the country are experiencing similar donation problems. BLOOD CAN be donated by anyone between the age of 17 and 70 who is in good health and weighs a minimum of 110 pounds.

Thousands of maligrams have been sent to regular donors and telephone recruitment has been stepped up in an effort to combat the shortage.
