Leading golf pros take a few strokes with a pen

My husband and I went to the Inverness Club in Toledo, Ohio, to watch our nephew, Rick Versure, play in the 1986 PGA championship. Although his 75 and 76 did not allow him to make the cut which was the reason we did not get hooked on the tournament, we attended each of the remaining days. At the tournament, I trailed the players off the course seeking signatures and Norm provided players for pars and birdies.

Early in the tournament I predicted the "white shark," Greg Norman, would be the winner and got his autograph the first day. But wrong! I was on the final day I became a tad panicky when Bob Tway, the 27-year-old winner from Oklahoma, State, made his awesome pitch shot out of the bunker and into the cup to win the tournament. I didn't have his autograph so I had to get a little aggressive in my efforts to obtain it. And get it I did at spite of being ushered off the presentation area by a marshal. As here is no way to tell before, a signature is the image the writer wishes to portray to the world and not necessarily like the rest of his handwriting. So it can be risky to analyze a signature alone. Still I thought some of my readers who are also golf aficionados might enjoy seeing how some of the country's leading pros execute their John Hancock.

Why not play Sherlock Holmes and see how many you can recognize.

Vows repeated after 51 years at granddaughter's wedding

Guests who were invited to a wedding last month in Detroit viewed two ceremonies that late afternoon.

The first was the marriage of Roseann Tugge to U.S. Army Captain Reid Hayes Albert in St. Paul's Monastery. The second took place during the wedding reception in Bonne Brook Golf Club when the bride's grandparents, Rose and Ernest Zaino, repeated their vows before the 100 guests. Deacon Dennis Scanland officiated at both ceremonies.

The Zainos were married July 7, 1934, in St. Benedict Catholic Church in Detroit and have lived in Farmington for the past 15 years where they are members of St. Fabian parish.

Among the guests who viewed both ceremonies were their children and their families. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Tugge of Northville; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Zaino, and Mr. and Mrs. Dick Zaino, all of Farmington.

The couple have 10 grandchildren and are expecting their first grandchild.

The couple arrived at the end of August.

Until his retirement Zaino was a self-employed commercial and residential builder.

Capt. and Mrs. Reid Albert pose on their wedding day with the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Zaino.
