

Musician/athletes travel on wind power

When they're not riding bikes from Seattle to Detroit to build wind power and atelina, trumpeter Kevin Good of Franklin (left), clarinetist Douglas Cornelius of Bloomfield Township (center) and hornist Bryan Kennedy of Warren are performing with the Detroit Chamber Winds and Detroit Symphony Orchestra. They started their 2,800-mile ride in Seattle on Aug. 19 and will be back and ready for the opening of the symphony's season on Sept. 16. To stay in tune with their careers as well as nature, a "sag-wagon," a van carrying their instruments, will join them on the fourth day out. All are experienced cyclists. Good annually logs 200 miles in 24 hours at the Belle Isle Bike Marathon.
