

Primary price for Wayne exec: $417,000

Edward McNamara spent $417,296 in his bid for the Democratic nomination for Wayne County executive, outdistancing nine other candidates in the race.

Campaign finance reports filed with the Wayne County Elections Commission earlier this month showed the Livonia mayor raised more than $349,000 by Aug. 25.

McNamara's post-primary expenses listed media bills of nearly $83,000 to his Washington, D.C. consultant, Jill Buckley and Associates.

McNamara also made a personal $12,000 loan on the campaign on Aug. 10.

THE NEAREST challenger in the Aug. 5 primary, County Commissioner Samuel Turner, of Detroit, failed to file a complete report by the deadline. Turner was charged $10 a day for late fees, according to a clerk in the elections commission.

Board of Commissioners Chairman John Hertel, of Harper Woods, who placed fourth, was second in money spent. His report stated he spent $343,089 while raising nearly $83,000 by Aug. 25. Included in the report was a $20,000 loan the candidate made to his campaign.

Sheriff Robert Picano, of Livonia, who placed third, raised nearly $280,000 and spent $261,001 by late August, according to his report.

Picano's report listed a bank debt of $20,000 which was paid. Late in the primary campaign, he received a $10,000 contribution from the Michigan AFL-CIO. Wayne County Sheriff's Local 502 contributed $14,000, the United Steel Workers' Political Action Commission donated $7,800, the Wayne County Bar Association gave $4,500 and the 16th Democratic District Party gave nearly $3,000 late in the campaign.

FRANK WILKERSON, an assistant county executive, raised $87,463 in his try for the Democratic nomination. He spent $68,391.

Sumpter Township Treasurer Thomas Gondek was the only other candidate to file a report. His post-primary report claims in-kind contributions totaling $32,679, though he raised only $285 in cash.

When questioned by officials with the Wayne County Election's Bureau, Gondek said those in-kind contributions were expenses for operating the office of his computer consulting company, Tomston Group, in Belleville.

Out of nearly $77,000, his report listed the cost of a security system ($3,000), various office supplies and utilities, the cost of leasing a copy machine, as well as 1,000 hours of computer time valued at $65,000 in all.
