

...Fishing great in fall

This group of fisherfolk line the Union Street bridge in Traverse City waiting for the Chinook to strike. The annual fall migration of the fish lures many anglers to area rivers.

Quite often the same waters will yield good catches of big browns, steelhead and whopper salmon.

Fine fall fishing is limited only by the imagination of the angler. If anything, it will be difficult to decide just which waters not to fish, since there are so many from which to choose.

With 1,000 inland lakes within a 50-mile radius of Traverse City, who could possibly know which one is the best? That's good enough reason to try fishing as many as possible right now. It's a good bet that none will disappoint the fisherman who knows what he or she is doing!

This young angler holds up a large salmon he hooked in the Boardman River by the Union Street Dam in Traverse City. The huge fish each fall make their way into area rivers and streams and anglers of all ages are out daily hoping for a little fishing luck.

The Secret is Out.
