Michigan crafters bring their bounty to folk art festival

As fall brings its harvest of crops, so does it bring the bounty of folk art and country crafts from Michigan artisans to Mercy High School every October.

The annual show and sale, "Folk Art and Country Crafts Festival," will run from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 4, in the school on the corner of 11 Mile and Middlebelt.

Crafters are coming from throughout Michigan to join their counterparts in this area to provide the showcase that is staged to raise funds for the school's scholarship program.

Jurying for the festival begins every January. The jurying committee not only juries for the quality of the craft, but also for the quality of the way it will be displayed. From approximately 300 applicants this year, 100 of the best crafts and their displays were chosen.

The committee believes that every facet of the folk arts and country crafts will be represented.

Some of the crafters highlighted by the committee are candles and tin candleholders by Eleanor Jo Loss of Flushing; duck decoys from Bob Brooks of Redford; wheat weaving by Lynette MacMillan from Lincoln Park and raffia dolls by Faith Tyrna of Riverview.

The wooden furniture to be shown comes from the Colbeck Family of Detroit. Woven baskets are brought by Barbara Teubert of Northville and clay candle houses by Janis McDowell of Ann Arbor.

Area artisans joining the festival are Marion Wilson of Farmington Hills who shows wall tanning and Elaine Hoogerwerf of Farmington who shows punched time and copper pieces.

Mercy High School's Mothers Club will run the Country Kitchen throughout show hours.

Admission of $1 is asked at the door.
