MOUTH POLLUTION

TO POLLUTE: to render unclean or impure

YOU, the general public, have polluted your waters, your air, your countryside... and you are also suffering from MOUTH POLLUTION.

MOUTH HEALTH IN U.S.
The United States has one billion unfilled cavities, 26 million toothless people, 80% of those over age 15 with a gum disease, and only 20% see a dentist at least once a year. Over half the children see a dentist the first time because of a toothache and 80% of the people seek dental care only when urgent pain or disfigurement.

RELUCTANT SMILES
Disfigured dental appearance has always inhibited a wholesome smile, and this can be a serious social and business drawback. The problem can most often be solved only by modern dental care, including tooth alignment, repair or replacement.

The problem existed in the 1800's, too.

MOUTHWASH DOESN'T DO IT!
Persistent bad taste and foul breath are most often caused by some oral malady which is diagnosable and correctable, for example, defective plastic dental appliances, decay, gum disease, tonsillitis, etc. Masking it with mouthwash, toothpaste or chewing gum is akin to covering the rubbish container with perfume. Mouthwashes do not have therapeutic value.

Proper mouth care requires effort on your part along with professional supervision. See your dentist for a program suited to you.

Women on the Go Peggy And Symphony Make Sweet Music

When the Plymouth Symphony tunes up Sunday for the concert that will launch its 25th anniversary season, Peggy Bunge of Garden City will be in her accustomed spot in the violin section.

What's more, her husband, Earl, will be over among the drummers, and you'll find son Craig, a Schoolcraft Community College student, seated with violin cello players.

Older son Tim, both a violinist and a drummer and recently returned from Vietnam, won't be with the orchestra, but he and his wife may well be in the audience with the music begins.

And the audience may also include Peggy Bunge's mother, Mrs. Mildred Rose, who has been her daughter's no. 1 fan since Peggy began playing piano and violin lessons as a child and later went on to study at the Jordan Conservatory of Butler University.

"She's an avid fan of the Plymouth Symphony and the Garden City orchestra," says her daughter.

Starting mainly from scratch, Mrs. Bunge began building a string music and orchestral program in the Garden City schools about seven years ago.

"At first I just went to the students who might be interested and talked to their families," she said. Now, working with cello player Doug Marsh who has joined the staff, she takes charge of a junior and senior high orchestra as well as teaching smaller groups in the elementary schools.

About 50 students representing four junior and two senior high schools are bussed each day for an orchestra rehearsal. "We get extra time on Wednesdays," Peggy said. SHE'S FOUND Garden City's "a nice school system — most encouraging and cooperative," and also had high praise for her associate March — "really a fine musician."

Peggy also makes her home the scene of another regular musical activity, Friday afternoon chamber music get-togethers.

"It's for some of the high school and junior high students who are ready for this kind of extra experience," she said. "We rehearse for a while and have a pizza and sometimes we sing. We all like having a little more time for music."

Mrs. Bunge is pleased that the high school orchestra was asked to perform at the dedication of Garden City auditorium named for former school superintendent E.J. O'Leary.

"The orchestra was one of his real loves," she said.

cians and others from many walks of life makes no difference in the fellowship, Mrs. Bunge said.

"There's a cordiality among the players, that transcends age," she added.

PEGGY HAS SERVED as personnel director of the orchestra, "which means mainly taking the toll," she said.

It also has involved, during several seasons, totaling up the many hours put into a Plymouth Symphony season.

"When you figure four or five rehearsals that take two and a half hours and then add the three hours the afternoon of the concerts and multiply that by eight concerts in a year for 100 people — well, it's rather appalling," she said.

"But that's the kind of loyalty you find — that's what the Plymouth Symphony means to all of us."

MONDAY EVENINGS for some 16 or 17 years, have been longed often to the Plymouth Symphony, which definitely is one of Peggy Bunge's real loves.

"You may be tired when you get there," she says, "but after two hours of rehearsal you leave feeling invigorated, uplifted."

"We're most grateful to have Wayne Dunlap as director. I'm sure it's because of his musicianship that so many good players come such distances, and his graciousness and individual interest in all of us makes such a difference."

The fact that the orchestra of about 100 includes professional musicians, student musicians

Joint Meeting Highlights Arts

A joint meeting of Farmington and Detroit Branches of the American Association of University Women will be held Wednesday, Oct. 21, at 8 p.m. at the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College.

The program, arranged by the two clubs' cultural interests chairmen, Mrs. Doris Gaston and Mrs. Irene Slink, will include music, readings and a talk on art.

Harold Patton, director of the London Arts Detroit Gallery, will be the featured speaker. Patton was educated at the Vancouver School of Fine Arts, the Banff School of Fine Arts and the University of British Columbia. He has won several major awards for painting and theater design. In 1966, he established the Vincent Price Gallery in Chicago.

Dr. Audrey S. Kirkland, a member of the Detroit branch, will give readings. She is an instructor in interpretative reading and public speaking at Wayne State University.

THE MUSIC will be presented by a choral group made up of members of the Detroit branch, with Carolyn Barth as director and Carol Babcock as accompanist.

534-4313. Alex Haggis, professor of biology at the University of Detroit, will give a talk entitled "Environmental Problems." This group's major project will be to research and publish a pamphlet to be called "Anti-Pollution Consumer's Report."

In connection with this, all interested are urged to attend the National Biologists' Congress on "Man and His Environment" in Cobo Hall, Nov. 6 to 10.

Those interested in joining the Farmington AAUW should call Mrs. Bernard McDermott, membership chairman, at 821-1942.
