

Training for teachers is intensifying

Shibler said he is interested not only in recruiting the first-year teacher, but also insuring "those teachers are competent. I want someone who selected teaching because they want it."
"THIS IS not a bandwagon," Farmington Superintendent Graham Lewis said about the staff development and training concept. "It's an evolutionary step. It's not a passing fancy."

Walled Lake assistant superintendent for finance Linda Moskalik said recent increases in staff development budgets in her district have given the district not only more informed teachers, but a "more enthusiastic" staff.

"There are positive vibrations," she said, "because we are committed to getting these people trained. It's nice to see people getting excited."

Both state and local education officials are concerned with a recent school employee retirement law that allows record numbers of workers to retire this year.
Following one year of study, the state committee developed several recommendations. It advocates a massive $50 million recruitment campaign involving the business community to encourage young people to choose teaching as a profession. The group also wants to raise teacher standards and improve teacher training programs at the state level, appointment of "mentors" for teachers, offer teachers more incentives and increase their salaries.

The Clarenceville district is taking a three-pronged approach to training beginning this year. It involves strengthening individual building needs and staffs, instructional improvements and instructional strategies.
Moskalik supports additional training — and maybe more educational time — for teachers at the college level, giving better preparation to new teachers.
In Farmington, three new teacher trainers are being hired to supplement the newly created staff development department headed by asstant superintendent Judith White. The process will involve out-of-class and in-class training with continued follow-up, Lewis said. "It's a whole process that's here to stay," he said.

"What we're beginning now is the evolution in the district."
Teaching today has reached a more technical level, Lewis added. "We can really study the science of teaching and teach those who are in college the basics of good teaching."
"Colleges are more and more looking at the specifics of teaching. It's a new era descending upon us. It's encouraging."

Residents pose questions

BUT COSTICK told Pilkinton that zoning and other issues — other than a house in violation of building codes — "are really not within the purview of the city."
Councilwoman Joas Dudley told the resident there was no need for a hearing. "All we literally can do is protest their findings." And the city agrees with the state that a license should not be issued until improvements are made on the house, she said.

Pilkinton told council he has made complaints to the state DSS and has copies of other alleged complaints about the applicants, who operate homes in the Detroit metropolitan area. The resident received copies of alleged complaints under the 1976 Michigan Freedom of Information Act.

"I don't feel the city is the proper party to protest under that basis," Dudley said, referring to alleged complaints that were not detailed or discussed.
The only basis on which the city can protest, Dudley continued, is on the physical structure of the house. Other complaints must be made to the state DSS.

DESPITE THE city's lack of authority over group home site and placement, Mayor Joe Alkateeb suggested the city notify the state and ask for more information about the applicants. "I am of the opinion we should file some objections," he said.
Councilwoman Jody Soronen agreed.
"Given that there is some question about the ability of the applicant to run the home in a manner that is acceptable to the city, state and residents... we, on behalf of neighbors, would at least like these complaints answered."

Class focus — arthritic youth

As many as 250,000 American children have some form of arthritis. This figure alone should dispel the stereotyped notion that arthritis is a disease of old age.
The parents of a child with arthritis soon become the primary care-giver and, as such, need to be equipped with knowledge and understanding of arthritis and how to manage it.
The Arthritis Foundation is offering, for the first time, an arthritis self-help course directed toward parents and older teenagers.

The six week class provides education about arthritis, treatments, exercise, relaxation, medication and joint protection. The course encourages group participation and mutual support between participants.
The class will be given at the Arthritis Foundation, 23999 Northwestern Highway, Southfield. It begins at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 28. The fee for the course is $20, which covers the cost of textbooks and printed materials. For scholarship information, call the foundation, 250-3030.

There are 11 state-designated group homes in Farmington Hills, according to recent city records. They are on Shawwassee, Middlebelt, Tuck, Waldron, Drake, Rollcrest, Hull, Greening and East Lyman.

Notes and news about the 1986 fall political campaign:

● ART GRANTS
The Michigan Council for the Arts has awarded 14 grants totaling $114,760 to further the work of artists, arts organizations and arts institutions throughout the 15th State Senate District.
"These awards provide funding for everything from theater groups and symphony orchestras to the operation of orchard houses," said State Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills.
"The arts make an important contribution to our quality of life. These grants are a tribute to the creative spirit of the artists, arts organizations and institutions of our district and their devotion to the cities which support them," Faxon said.
The council's grant determinations are designed to increase financial support and public awareness of the arts, promote arts education and make the highest quality art possible accessible to all people throughout Michigan.
The arts grants represent 10 different grant programs in the areas of arts organization support, arts education, arts project support, community arts development, mini grants and individual artists.
Additional grants will be awarded during the course of the year.
