Cable TV provides insight into community

cable connection

Lark Samouelian

executive director, Southwestern Oakland Cable Commission

Every other month, 10 to 15 residents complete a television remote workshop. This enables one to take the camera and equipment out on location to cover an event or create a new show. We have mentioned in previous ar-new show.

We have mentioned in previous articles the first-time-out trauma. So many have not taken that lirits step because they become overwhelmed with not knowing just exactly what to cover. Therefore, we are asking you to help.

Please call the SWOCC office at $473-7267 and tell us of an event you would have them videotape. The length and format would be determined between you and the view videographer. Also, check your own roster for your own members who have graduated and could help.

To begin, it may be most comfortable for all to have a short story with a quick interview or simply video taping the event for the local news show. Tri-Outlook News covers all three cities — Farmington. Therefore, what will be happening, what is happening and what has happened is most appropriate.

This experience will enable each workshop graduate to perfect their new-found skills and develop a rapport in their hometown through such a community service.
