Electronic yule

bines a unique reflection system for even toasting plus electronic timing.

For toy tech, check out Grubby the octopede. He's the newest friend of Teddy Ruxpin. Worlds of Wonder's talking bear that was a hit last Christmas. The two can be interlinked to sing songs and tell stories in sync with each other.

The hottest new game in the toy stores may be that prehistorical classic "Cowboys and Indians" with a high tech twist. Lazar Tag by Worlds of Wonder and Photon Laser Blast by LJN Toys use pistols that fire concentrated beams of (safe) infrared light up to 100 feet. Belts and helmets worn by players have LED sensors that register a hit with scoring lights and an audible beep.

If someone on your gift list is intimidated by all the knobs and buttons on a conventional VCR, consider one with one-screen display that takes you through programming step-by-step.

If you're aiming for something smaller, maybe a bit less expensive, a couple of blank VCR tapes, audio cassettes or computer diskettes would delight any "techie" on Christmas morning.
