School of Graphic Design at Michigan State University, is well known on campus for his comic, "Shut Up and Laugh," which ran in the State News last year. He now does the comic under a fake name and title, with a different style and humor.

It appears to most MSU students that Moylan quit the comic and handed the job over to Cliff Ledge to do "Stately Manner."

"I actually have to make up characteristics about this imaginary Cliff Ledge when people ask about him, and I usually tell them he's a glutton for punishment," Moylan said.

REACTION TO the comic has generally been positive. "Because I've had practice at it, the comic is a lot funnier and easier to do," Moylan said.

Moylan is amused when people tell him that Cliff Ledge's "Stately Manner" is funnier than "Shut Up and Laugh."

At the beginning of his junior year, Moylan replaced the former car-
