

Perfectionist spaces with care

Dear Mrs. Green:

A number of years ago, a co-worker who analyzed handwriting as a hobby told me mine was "too perfect" to analyze!

While I've been called a "perfectionist," I hardly think of myself as perfect — I feel as though I'll always have a lot to learn.

At present, I'm a 37-year-old homemaker. In the next year or two, I expect to return to work part time.

K.N.
Livonia

Dear K.N.:

I don't know exactly what your co-worker had in mind when she looked at your handwriting. But I strongly suspect she meant you were a person with traits of a perfectionist. Because this is what I see as I peruse your script, replete with all the punctuation and careful spacing.

Your daily life is well-organized. Strong discipline and determination have you duty-bound to accomplish whatever you feel is your responsibility. In fact, you are willing to assume additional responsibility to further enhance your self-image.

graphology
Lorene Green

A number of years ago a co-worker who analyzed handwriting as a hobby told me mine was 'too perfect' to analyze!

This handwriting suggests there is something for which you continue to blame yourself.

Interpersonal relationships bring enjoyment. And you reach out to others with a helping hand and friendly smile. Disposition is usually kept on an even keel, and you have a pleasant demeanor. But you can lose your cool when your structured world meets with too many interruptions.

A meaningful discussion is to your liking. And while you would probably not be the one to provoke an argument, you do have a ready retort when you feel the need for it.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed through this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 33251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper writing in the first-person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. And objective feedback is always welcome.

sume additional responsibility to further enhance your self-image.

You are able to handle details well, and your memory is retentive. I think you are probably a visual learner.

noted, and you will not do things to jeopardize this.

YOU ARE a dependable woman and can be counted on to handle tasks efficiently. Nothing less than your best effort would satisfy your inner standards.

A high regard for security is

IT'S THE LAW:

Nursing home patients who qualify for Medicaid may legally retain certain monetary assets. Write or call for more information. It's all in our helpful booklet "DID YOU KNOW?"

HARRY J. WILL FUNERAL HOMES, INC.
3 LOCATIONS — ALL NEAR FREEWAYS
Redford — 25450 Plymouth Rd.
Livonia — 37000 Six Mile Rd. 937-3870
Detroit — 4412 Livonia Ave.

Trust 100
FREE
NO COST OR OBLIGATION USEFUL
MONEY-SAVING FACTS

(Phone us or mail in this coupon.)

Yes, I am interested in more details. Please send me Report #1 "Did You Know?"

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____

Zip: _____ Phone: _____

ATTENTION SENIOR CITIZENS & NON-DRIVERS

Let METRO AREA TRANSIT take you shopping. Never worry about transportation again! We will accompany you to the bank, doctors appointments, pharmacist, shopping malls and the grocery store.

- 24 hour advance notice required
- 6 days a week beginning at 9:00 a.m. (7 days available upon request)
- No wheelchair service
- No smoking in vehicle

SERVICE STARTING MARCH 17th

ACCEPTING RESERVATIONS NOW: (313) 459-9334

Josephine Fox Fink was hosted at a family dinner in Bolfoford on this month in celebration of her 92nd birthday. The long-time Farmington resident was born March 10, 1895, in New York City and came to Detroit with her family in 1917.

She moved to Hayes Street, in Farmington, before there was city water on that street, and about 12 years ago purchased one of the historical houses on Shilawasse, had it restored and resides there now.

Fink had but a few months of business school education, but opened her own secretarial service in the Washington Blvd. Building, which folded during the crash of 1929, and kept on working as a free lance stenographer. She had an offer to join Russell Kelly in a secretarial service he was trying to get under way, but declined saying she wanted her independence.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.

She worked daily until the age of 90, but still lunches and visits friends weekly in downtown Detroit in and around the Penobscot Building.

In Farmington she was a longtime member of the historical society and the Farmington Players. She is the widow of Louis Fox. The couple had no children.

Her younger brother, Fredrick Fox, and her three nieces hosted the birthday celebration.

For 34 years she worked for the Fred G. Nagle Company in the Penobscot Building and was dubbed as 'Mrs. Penobscot' stemming in large part from articles she wrote for the Detroit Monitor. When many of those articles were compiled into a book, Double Day Book Store, in the Penobscot Building, feted 'Mrs. Penobscot' with a gala autograph signing party.