Wine tasting

Sam Sheena, from Farmington Hills Market, will be furnishing and pouring 20 kinds of wine from California, Germany and France during a wine tasting night that begins at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Knights of Columbus Hall, 24233 Orchard Lake Road. The event is sponsored by Farmington Area Community Women. Tickets at $10 each are available from Denise Albrecht, 478-3218, or at the door.

Area gardeners help create DIA's 'Art and Flowers'

Only outstanding members of Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan have been invited to design the elaborate artistic floral interpretations that will complement 50 selected works of art for Detroit Institute of Arts' "Art and Flowers Festival of Spring."

A host of ticketed events are

Chinese cooking class is offered

Ina Tchen, a long time instructor for Farmington Community Center, offers another of her Chinese cooking classes for both men and women at 7:30 p.m. Mondays, beginning May 4.

In the three-session class beginners will learn how to make hot-sour soup, almond chicken, oyster sauce beef, sweet-sour dishes and stir-fry vegetables using authentic regional techniques.

The $34 fee includes three complete meals. Pre-paid registrations are taken in the center, 24705 Farmington Road.

scheduled for the festival but guided decent tours of the arts and flowers exhibit are offered free to the public Wednesday through Saturday.

Elaine Gunderson, a member of Hill and Dale Garden Club, is exhibition coordinator for the garden club displays. Jan Dolan, a member of Farmington Garden Club, is in the invitational flower design exhibition chairman. Both are residents of Farmington Hills.

Dolan, and Kay Blakeney, another member of Farmington Garden Club, and Emma Cartee, a member of Botsford Garden Club, all contribute floral arrangements for the festival by invitation.

Members of Hill and Dale who received invitations for their interpretative works are Amy Langdon, Jean Moran, Nancy Pasfield, June Phell, Ruth Trombley, and Gunderson.

This year's festival is celebrated by the museum as a salute to Michigan's sesquicentennial.

All proceeds from the festival will benefit the Art and Flowers Tribute Fund, an endowment restricted to the beautification of the museum. The first Art and Flowers Festival, celebrated in 1985 as a part of the museum's centennial, drew nearly 17,000 visitors and raised $108,000.

The effort is sponsored by the museum's volunteer committee, women's committee and activities committee which boast a combined membership of nearly 600 persons.

Information on daily packages which include lectures, demonstrations, international entertaining, horticulture experts, luncheons and a fashion show, will be given by calling Detroit Institute of Arts public relations department, 833-7963.

Competing for title

Dawn Syrian, an honors student at Farmington High School, will be in Plymouth next weekend competing for the title of Miss Michigan Co-ed.

The Farmington resident was selected to attend Girls State and a leadership conference, representing her school. She is captain of her school's Pom-Pom Squad, class representative for the Spanish Club and a member of the Ski Club.

She has been tap-dancing for seven years and now studies at the Dickerman Dance Studios in Farmington. She holds an award for playing the flute and a Red Cross Advanced Life Saving Card.

The winner of the Miss Michigan Co-ed title will compete for the title of Miss American Co-ed in Honolulu, Hawaii.
