Carvings shown at zoo

An ark-load of small wooden enimals carved about 65 years ago by Fred K. Alten is on display at the Detroit Zooinrough Sunday, May 17. Alten, a laborer by profession, retreated to his backyard each night to pursue his artistic exploits. He drew on his imagination and favorite 19th century naturalistic drawings. Each work includes details such as skin and fur, scratched and combed into the wax coated wood. The pieces are on loan from Joe and Lee Dumas, George Meyer and Mary Middlebrook.

Containers save space

The National Gardening Association reports that gardening is an important part of America's ilfestyle and values. Gardening is the chosen outdoor activity of 44 percent of Americans surveyed. Bicycling, Itshing, and Jogging follow. Hooray for all you gardeners.

Some time ago, vegetable gardening was a way to save money. Now people garden because they like fresher-tasting vegetables and appreciate the better quality, better nutrition and the resulting better health.

If space is limited for a garden on your premises, consider container gardening — some crops to try are lettuce, eggplants, peppers, formatoes and herbs. Be sure the containers have good drainage.

They won't be walked on and therefore seldom require deep cultivating. Weeding is easier, and rops can be planted closer together since walking space between rows will not be necessary. Consider crop interplanting if your garden plants and crows.

After harvesting the first crop, the slower-growing one has time to develop. Two combinations you may wish to try are radishes and carols, lettuce and tomatoes.

Another idea is succession planting. Cool-season crops such as peas and bibb lettuce can be followed with beans and swiss chard. After there are harvested, crops such as cabbage, kale or spinach can be planted for fall harvesting.

The soil in the container gardens should be "boosted" with a few inches of organic matter. Fertilizer should be applied each time you plant. When you are shopping for plants and seeds, will a few inches of regaine matter. Fertilizer should be applied each time you plant. When you are shopping for plants and seeds.
