

House tells parents: Buckle up your kids

AP — Children between the ages of 5 and 12 would have to buckle up, even in the back seat, under a bill approved overwhelmingly by the state House.

Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, the bill's sponsor, said it's aimed at "developing a generation of seat-belt users."

Reacting to reports that only a third of the state's children wear seat belts, the House Thursday passed, on an 80-16 vote, a bill requiring children to use seat belts in the back seat of vehicles. Michigan law already requires all front-seat passengers to wear safety belts.

representatives supported the bill except Willard Webb, D-Hazel Park, who voted no, and three who were absent — Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, Matt Danuskiss, R-Lake Orion, and Judith Miller, R-Birmingham.

KOSTEVA CITED state police statistics that show that children ages 4 to 15 use restraint devices only 34 percent of the time.

"This is another step in encouraging the use of seat belts, particularly for young people who are most vulnerable to injury," Kosteva said.

The bill, now on its way to the Senate, calls for $10 fines for any driver who allows young passengers not to use their seat belts.

The bill would also amend the state's 5-year-old child restraint law to require out-of-state residents and drivers of pickup trucks to place children under age 5 in child car seats. Both groups had been exempted under the 1982 law.

Kosteva had also attempted to remove an exemption that allows nursing mothers to carry their children rather than place them in restraint devices.

"My view is that is one of the most dangerous situations you can have," Kosteva said. "It's like having a beach ball inside your car."

BUT REP. NELSON Saunders, D-Detroit, successfully kept the exemption in the bill.

Saunders argued that it was impractical to require a mother who was nursing to pull over every time her child was hungry.

"There's no way to practically nurse an infant without allowing a child to get out of the seat for one moment," Saunders said.

Although Saunders said he hoped most women would pull over to nurse, he said the bill should allow some flexibility.

THE BILL would also mean police officers could pull over a motorist who has back seat passengers who aren't buckled up, even though police can't stop a car whose front seat occupants aren't wearing seat belts, Kosteva said.

That's because Kosteva's bill would amend the child restraint law, which is considered a primary offense. Michigan's seat belt law, which took effect July 1, 1985, does not allow officers to stop a motorist for a seat belt violation.

But Kosteva pointed out that if all four members of a four-member family were not wearing their seat belts, an officer could stop the car. ticket the driver because the children weren't wearing seat belts and then give the parents a ticket as a secondary offense.

Halfway house bill opposed here

Oakland County officials oppose a state Senate bill requiring classification of prisoners in halfway houses — largely because they have no halfway houses and don't plan to set them up.

The committee voted 6-0 to oppose Senate Bill 89, introduced by Sen. Jackie Vaughn III and now in a Senate committee. Its recommendation goes to the full county board.

Vaughn's bill requires halfway houses and alternative programs to segregate prisoners by 1) sex, 2) age, at the 19-year level. It would require 17-19-year-olds to be given priority for alternative programs.
