1 tsp, ground clonamon
2 cup syogurt
5 pounds boneless lamb, cut into cubes
2 cups butter

eubes "4 cup butter more curry powder (if desired)

Combine all the ingredients except lamb and butter in a blender or food Jamb and butter in a blender or root processor and process until smooth. Marinate lamb in the mixture at least! to 2 hours or longer, if possi-ble. Melt the butter in the crockpot and add the lamb and marinade mixture, cover and simmer for 4-5 hours. This makes a mild curry so have some extra curry standing by. Serve with rice.

Popularity comes and goes

One of the many curious aspects of the world of wines (as I suppose it is with a lot of commodities) is he cycle of popularity and decline through which they go. Today, it possible to any that chenin blanc riesting and the gamays are definitely "out."

On the other hand, the popularity of Cabernet Sauvignon and Chardonny are now unprecedently chemical to the commodities of the commodities o them, from France to California to Australia.

And there are those wines which hang on, barely, to their modest po-sitions in the marketplace, neither growing nor diminishing, but mar-ginal nonetheless. Among these are pinot blanc, Petite Sirah and gewurztraminer.
(I am going to write this column with no mention of Zinfandel and its metamorphasis from a red wine to an apparent white, a topic in it-soil.)

panion to Cabernet Sauvignon as well as now to be marketed as a viell as now to be marketed as a viell as now to be marketed as a varietat. There is yet little available on marchants' shelves as a varietat, but all indications are that this is about to change. Remember, a decade ago meriot was a novelty. Ingienook is about 10; and it is a third of the Flora Springs highly esteemed "Prilogy."

The only locally available release that I am aware of is the Congress Springs, but the Coppola Family winery, a sub-set of Niebaum Coppola, has made a stunning statement with its 1982 release, available only in California. And it is a least a gleam in the eyes of the Napa property owners of Shafer, Kennan, Sterling, Newton and Conn Creek, all of whom have some in the ground at least.

THE WINES FROM the Caber-

THE WINES FROM the Caber-net Franc grape, drunk unblended, tend to be hard and simple, barely suitable to table wine use. They Eyrie, Ponzi, Adetsheim and Forgeron all produce this varietal, with Yamilli Valley soon to follow all from the northern, cooler region of the Williamette Valley. The growing interest and popularity of Oregon wines nationally will accelerate public awareness of this alternative to Chardonnay.

It is, I understand, a most prestigious thing in a fine restaurant, to order a pinot girls instead of a Chardonnay, showing the sommelier that you know something he perhaps does not. (Reports that the Zug Island Winery has a small plot pinto girls are unfounded, according to owner Bronco Nerd.
