look at all areas and make recommendations," Brasch said. "We'll keep a file for our clients. If they haven't decided to do it all at once, there is a running file for them when they are ready."

ONCE THE CUSTOM interiors are installed, Brasch said the adjustability makes particularly useful for children and women.

"They can adjust to changing needs. You can rearrange the rods and shelf heights or the baskets as kids get older and taller," she said. "Needs also change as children have less toys and games and more clothing."

Brasch said the firm works with homeowners but also works with builders and designers during new construction or remodeling projects.

"If people have blueprints, we can make suggested improvements," she said. "We will work with them from the first stages for space utilization."

For people moving, space utilization can be very important, according to Brasch, especially when the move is to a smaller home. "A couple moving from their home to a condominium needs to condense their belongings and make every inch count," she said.

Clutter Control was started nine years ago by Brasch and a partner who is now retired. It was her own recent move that helped Brasch see the need for such a business.

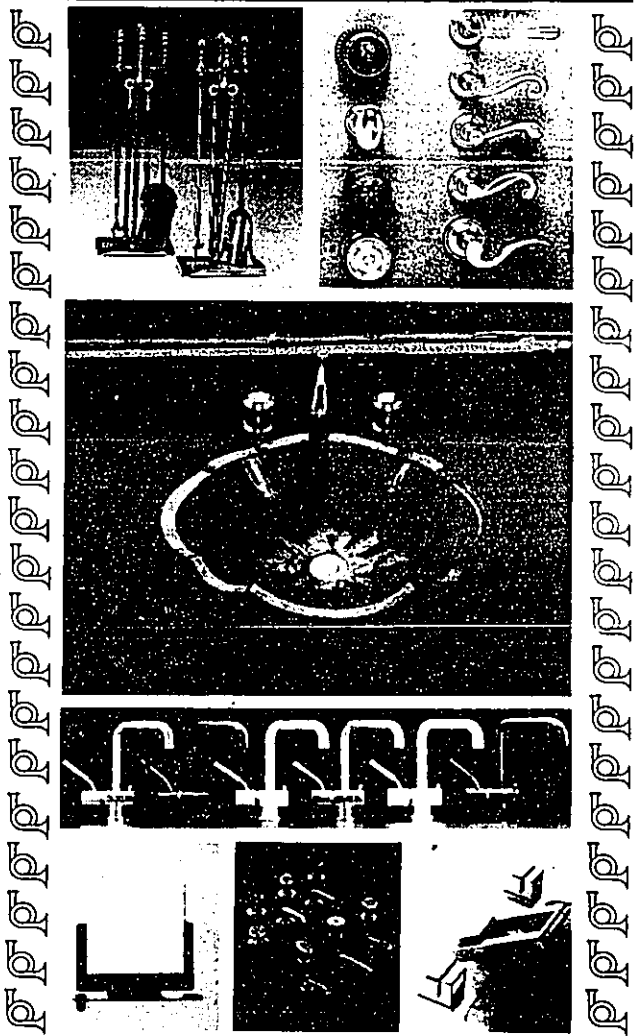

"I was quite organized but I realized that if I had enough closet or storage space I probably wouldn't have moved from my last house," she said. "When my partner suggested this, I saw that many people don't know how to maximize their space or how to help themselves."
