

Staples to perform with Symphony

The Cultural Council of Pontiac will host a performance of the Detroit Symphony at 8 p.m. Friday in the auditorium of Pontiac Central High School, Congressman Deb Carr, chairman of the Congressional Arts Caucus, is honorary chairman of the event.

General admission tickets, $5 each, are available in advance at the Cultural Council of Pontiac, in the lower level of the library at 58 E. Pike St., Pontiac 48058, during regular business hours or by mail order. They may also be purchased at the door.

Sponsored by Hudson's, the April 22 concert is part of the ninth annual Hudson's-Detroit Symphony Metro Tour. The program will include light classics and pop selections. In 1988, Staples was a finalist in the Quest for Excellence, and he spent this past summer in Cleveland studying chamber music with David Cerone at the Encore School for Strings. He is the son of two Detroit Symphony Orchestra violinists, Gordon and Beatriz Staples.

Scholarship winner sings at Cranbrook

By Gwen Forbes special writer

Teresa Fedea — a melodic name for a soprano. "Music hath charms . . . music is the international language. . . ."

Choose a quotation. Many apply to Fedea's recent performance for Cranbrook Music Guild. She provided a printed translation of the French, Italian and German lyrics in her repertoire — a courtesy not often afforded concert-goers.

Fedea easily expressed flirtation, serenely and dignily as each selection demanded. She appeared to care about her audience. Her interpretation of Charles Ives' "Memories" was haunting. The "Magda" aria from Puccini's "La Bohème" came in rich tones, evoking an earlier Kiri Te Kanawa.

Fedea is the Music Guild's Betty Brewster scholarship winner. She is a candidate for a master's in music at the University of Michigan, where she earned her bachelor's. She recently sang Poppea in "The Coronation of Poppea" at the Mendelssohn Theater in Ann Arbor.

At the afterglow she thanked the Guild for its support. The 1988-89 season will open in early October.
