Young, old mix among science school projects

YOUNG AND old filled the hallways of Wooddale Elementary April 15, as students showed off their school and homemade science projects.

It was a combination Science Fair/Grandparents Day — a special afternoon for students of all ages. Grandparents and special visitors gripped carnations as they viewed the special artwork that graced the walls.

In one first grade room, teacher

Carolyn Kugler was busily shooting video footage, snapping photos, and pumping hands in greeting. "I haven't slept for five days — this is great," she told one pair of visitors.

In the gymnasium, student interests jumped to life in the school's first science exhibit. Volcanoes, crystal growth, nutrition and oceanography were just a few of the topics of the many projects, which ranged from kindergarten to fifth grade.
