Baskets for mother ready

Students in Farmington Training Center have made 240 baskets that are now ready to go into the garden therapy classes, be filled and delivered in time for Mother's Day.

"This was an extraordinary accomplishment," said Sue Punderburk, who works with the severely mentally handicapped. "We've been working on the baskets for almost six months in the woodshop class and we made our deadline. I have 15 very proud students."

The garden therapy classes are conducted by members of Hill and Dale Garden Club who come into the classrooms once a month for the center's students to create a project of natural materials that is both educational and therapeutic.
