Screening out pests

fabric can hide garbage cans, compost piles or utility areas from view.

A screen-enclosed deck, porch or patio extends your living space outdoors at minimum cost. You'll have an outdoor living room that's light and airy by day, and lets in pleasant evening breezes without moths and mosquitoes.

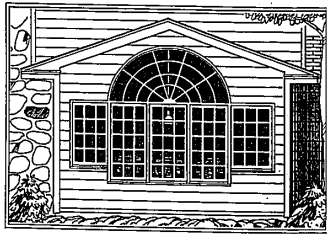

YOUR CARPORT CAN become an insect-free summertime playhouse with screen-enclosed sides and folding screened doors. Or, with a little skill, you can build a screen-enclosed summerhouse for outdoor family living and entertainment.

A new booklet, free on request, illustrates a baker's dozen different ways that you can use screening around your home to achieve privacy, extra living space and insect-free outdoor living at low cost. For the most part, these are projects that can be completed without particular skill. To get your copy of "Screens Aren't Just for Windows," send a postcard to the Insect Screening Weavers Association, Post Office Box 8727, Harrisburg, PA 17105.

A screen-enclosed summerhouse is a pleasant place to relax or entertain. Insect screening provides both daytime and after-dark comfort, and solar screening on one or more sides adds both privacy and shade where needed.
