Summer safety tips for cooling units

Air conditioners and electric fans are safe and energy-efficient during the balmy Michigan summers. If you check them out before you plug them in.

Detroit Edison suggests several tips for the safe and efficient use of appliances during the cooling season.

• AIR CONDITIONERS
• Before attempting to do any work on an air conditioner yourself, make sure the electrical power is disconnected.

• Clear the condenser coils of dust, leaves, grass clippings, etc.
• Clean the fan blade annually.
• Make sure cracks around a portable air conditioner are properly sealed.

• Change or clean the air filters every 30 to 60 days during the cooling season.

• Install proper insulation, weatherstripping and caulking, to keep warm air out and cool air in.

• Keep storm windows in place and closed when cooling, and keep windows and doors leading to uncooled parts of the house closed. Keep draperies closed when windows are directly in the sun.

• Have your central air conditioner checked once a year by a trained service contractor.
• When central air conditioning is installed together with an existing furnace, make sure all unwanted openings in air ducts, including base registers are sealed. Check to see if the furnace filters are clean. Check for damage to the insulation covering on the tubing to the outside condenser unit.

• ELECTRIC FANS
• To avoid personal injury or damage to portable fans, keep them out of reach of young children. Child-protection coverings may help ensure safety and can be purchased from your local hardware store. Make sure young children do not attempt to reach or tamper with ceiling fans.

• Check the cords on portable fans for broken or cracked wire insulation.
• For better circulation and safety when using window fans, make sure your draperies are secured and do not become entangled in the fan.

TO MAKE these money-saving and safety tips work best for you, take advantage of Detroit Edison's free Home Energy Analysis. For an appointment, call 1-800-482-2903.

A Detroit Edison energy consultant will provide a detailed analysis of the energy efficiency of your home with information on how to cut costs.
