

Dances of India slated

Dr. Padma Subrahmanyam, one of India's most celebrated classical dancers, will appear with her troupe of eight musicians and dancers at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Rackham Auditorium in Detroit's Cultural Center.

The presentation will be in the classic form, Bharata Nrityam, a type of ballet/drama based on mythology.

Subrahmanyam has been awarded India's most prestigious national award, the Padmasri. She is noted for her original work in choreography and music composition, both in solo pieces and dance dramas. She currently is director of Nrityodaya, a highly-respected dance school founded in 1962 by her father. This non-profit organization provides free dance and musical training to talented underprivileged students.

The Detroit appearance will be the only one in this area. It is sponsored by the foundation of the Michigan Association of Physicians from India. Contributions are tax deductible. Proceeds will support programs to provide polio vaccination for children in India and medical aid to homeless persons in Michigan, according to Dr. Ujjamini Kothari, chairman of the sponsoring organization. Tickets are $15, $25 and $15. For information, call Dr. Kothari, 644-1269 or Dr. Niru Maskal, 682-9038.
