

Women artists featured at Focus

By Manon Meilgaard
special writer

July hasn't been designated Women Artists Month, but it might as well be. Women occupy center stage this month in exhibits at Code Gallery of Royal Oak, Hilberry Gallery of Birmingham, Broadway and Willis galleries of Detroit and Detroit Focus on the edge of Detroit's Greektown.

The third of Detroit Focus's annual studio visit exhibits, "Current Work," features installations and films by Andrea Els and paintings by Stephanie Sarris, both of whom have master's degrees from Cranbrook Academy of Art, and drawings by Carol Schramm, who has a master's from University of Michigan. All three received 1988 Arts Foundation of Michigan honorariums.

This year's curators were MaryAnn Wilkinson, associate curator of 20th-century art at Detroit Institute of Arts, and Joseph Wesner, sculptor and Center for Creative Studies faculty member.

As is the practice, work was selected from a series of studio visits. In a joint statement the curators wrote that the artists were selected for, among other qualities, "a crucial mix of talents which link them as artists who will be always pushing and challenging their own limits — and ours."
