

Library teams with cable TV for family series

Once again Farmington Community Library shows interest in community television programming.

Resident cable TV producer Bob Lichtman asked library director Bev Papai to consider accepting video tapes of his locally produced series, "Crisis in the Modern Family." Soon, the library will have these tapes available for the public. The show deals with topics such as teen suicide, runaways, abuse, chemical dependency, incest, eating disorders.

Bob suggests that high school students assigned research papers will benefit from these programs. Parents will find that their awareness to be alert to such crises will be improved.

Families may watch the program on Channel 12 as well as pick up a copy at the library to view.
