

Farmington

Eric McClelland, 14, was named the Farmington Observer's carrier of the month for February. He delivers the Observer along Power and along 11 Mile. He has been a carrier since 1985. The O.E. Dunkel Middle School eighth grader's favorite subjects are woods, metal, Spanish, English and math. His hobbies are playing soccer and pool. His future plans include attending college. Meeting new people and learning how to manage money are some of the things he has learned on his route.

Hunt now for summer jobs

In the middle of winter, the last thing some people may be thinking of is summer employment, but now is exactly the right time to begin the search for a summer job.

"We generally tell people who are looking for a summer job to start the day after New Year's," says Hugh Day, a Job Service counselor with the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC).

He advises job seekers to fill out applications with 50 employers or more, and to follow up on all of them. "You should overdo it," he said.

Joyce Jones, a training instructor with Kentucky Fried Chicken National Management Inc., reminds young people that employers will probably ask for at least two pieces of identification, including one picture ID and a Social Security card.

Jones and Day are two of the guests offering advice to job hunters on the weekly cable television program, "The Job Show," airing at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 16 on Metrovision Channel 12.

THE GUESTS agree that job hunters should go to prospective places of employment in person and ask to fill out an application, rather than merely telephoning to inquire about jobs.

"Many times the application is the only thing we have to go on," Jones explained. She says that a manager preparing for an interview will judge a job seeker based on how neatly and completely the application has been filled out.

During an interview, the employer looks for people with initiative, says

Jones. "It's important to have a good attitude."

Perry Freelon, employment specialist with Meijer Inc., says the way applicants present themselves at interviews is an indication of what their personality will be on the job. "We can teach you about the products, we can teach you how to write up a sales slip, but we can't teach you how to smile," is the way he sums it up.

The second segment of this edition of "The Job Show," will feature Denise Dora, coordinator for Project ABLE, discussing employment opportunities for workers over 55.

"The Job Show" is produced as a public service by the MESC.
