

Local shows shared with broader audience

The networking among the community television and radio channels has established roots throughout the country. Many locally originated programs have begun to be shared in neighboring communities.

Residents dedicated to particular causes are asked to voice their opinions in other television studios. Blocks of programming hours may be seen in other communities on other cable systems or through microwave links. For example, our own Ben Marks appeared on a Lansing-based television series, "On Line Lansing." This program is an issue-oriented government panel discussion. The credits establish a commitment to excellence. Executive producer, Chris Keller, co-executive producer, David Flag, co-producers Dan Pennington and Jeff Simonson — all are representatives of the MSU Telecasters Production Team. They are funded by the Association of Students of Michigan State University.

Hosts of the program are Carl

Bernstein and Rick Danghart. The faculty advisor is Bob Albers. As you visit other communities, glance over the local cable listing what a wonderful sense of community you will feel when you run across one of our own programs from Farmington, Novi or Farmington Hills.
