JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

The large vessel is the work of Chris Hawthorne and James Nowak and is part of the display at Robert Kidd Gallery of Birmingham.

Detroit Gallery of Contemporary Crafts of Detroit has a glass show, so does Touch of Light of Ferndale and 16 Hands of Ann Arbor.

Three-panel glass screen above is in one of the atriums in Triatria of Farmington Hills where Habitat Galleries is now located. It is by Susan Silnmuehlen-Arent and is titled "Pro-Rata Lyracism." The bottle from the Roman Empire, circa 1st/2nd century AD is in the show at Donna Jacobs Gallery

"Fractal Geometers" is one of several glass sculptures by Ginny Ruggner at Habitat Galleries which incorporate images of Christmas tree lights as a take off point.
