

Samaritan Center satellite opens

Clients are now being scheduled for the recently opened Embury branch of The Samaritan Counseling Center of Southeastern Michigan. After nearly a year's planning, the satellite office in the Embury United Methodist Church, 1803 E. 14 Mile, Birmingham, is open to serve the communities of Birmingham, Royal Oak, Troy, Bloomfield Hills, Beverly Hills, Lathrup Village, Berkley, and Clawson.

Staff currently assigned to the Embury office are counselors Laura Sell and Carol Dutler.

Those who wish to make an appointment or a referral to the Embury Counseling satellite should phone the Samaritan Centers' main office, 474-4701, since all scheduling is being handled at the Knox House central office in Farmington Hills.

The Samaritan Counseling Center, currently housed in Knox House of the First Presbyterian Church of Farmington, 25165 Farmington Road, and the new Embury satellite office in Embury United Methodist Church, provide counseling and psychotherapy services to individuals, children, adolescents and adults, couples, families, and groups.

The counseling centers offer mental and spiritual health education for both church and community, as well as continuing education for pastors and other religious professionals.

The Samaritan Counseling Centers were organized by local churches in response to a need to provide quality therapy within a Judeo/Christian context. The centers serve communities in Southeastern Michigan with care and respect, assisting people who face difficulties. The centers' goal is to help individuals and families move toward wholeness, health, and continued growth.
