

Italian music on Meadow Brook bill Cranbrook House open on Thursdays

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra presents a program of popular Italian opera music for its fourth week at the Meadow Brook Music Festival.

Gianna Rolandi, soprano, and Tino Di Paolo, tenor, join Andrew Davis and the DSO in favorite operatic arias and duets by Puccini, Bellini, Verdi and Donizetti. Also on the program are Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Puccini's "The "Dance of the Hours" and Respighi's "The Fountains of Rome."

Performances take place at the Baldwin Pavilion on the campus of Oakland University and include a special 8 p.m. Friday performance in addition to the 8 p.m. Sunday concert.

Davis, conductor laureate of the Toronto Symphony, is music director of the Glyndebourne Festival Opera and becomes music director of the BBC Symphony, London, beginning with the 1989-90 season.

Roland's meteoric rise began with her 1975 debut at the New York City Opera, where she quickly became the company's leading coloratura soprano. Since her first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera in 1979 Roland has frequently performed there and with many of the great opera companies in this country. A favorite in European opera houses as well, she debuted at Glyndebourne in 1981 and made her recording debut for EMI records as Susanna in "The Marriage of Figaro" with the Glyndebourne Festival cast.
