You don't just get to be Blake Clark, the Vietnam veterans' come-dian without a battle, the comedian

"It was a real uphill battle and I struggled for every inch."
Clark will perform Wednesday through Saturday, Aug. 23-26, at Chaplin's East in Fraser.
A Georgia native, he always want-dot to be a comedian, but was deterred by other obligations. "First. I had to go to Vietnam and defend my country, then I came home and met my wife, married, and had my two boys."

Before he put on the khaki uniform and shipped out to Vietnam, Clark only dreamed of a career in comedy. "I had a lot of different careers. Then I did community theatre in Macon, Georgia and I loved it. I wanted to make the move."

Clark's wife, whom he married 17 years ago, became the mover and shaker when she told him, impatiently: "Either do it or shut up."

SO IT was the Clark Family

SO IT was the Clark Family moved to Los Angeles nine years ago, and he struggled and inched to get to where he wanted to be, in show business.

'Some say you can't go to school to be a comedian, Actually, you can go to school, but you can't learn to be funny."

— Blake Clark

ly, you can go to school, but you can't learn to be funny."

Without hesitation, Clark says he is shi own favorite comedian.
"But I like Robin Williams and Jay Leon and some others. I also like Roseanne Barr and Paula Palenstone, but the others, being males, are my role models. In terms of female comedians, two things I'm sick of hearing about are PMS and dating. There's got to be something more important in people's experience."

Clark, deeply affected by his experiences in the Victams War, says that every day when he wakes up he thinks about how fortunate he is to be American and living happily with his family.

"I NEVER EXPECTED to be liv."

"I NEVER EXPECTED to be living the last 18 years of my life. I'm the lucklest guy there is. Most comedians are not really happy, but I have a great personal life." In said.

"Vietnam was very tough to go through, but it could have been worse. I got through it without having hand to hand combat or gus dying all around me.

"They died, all right, but it could have been worse.

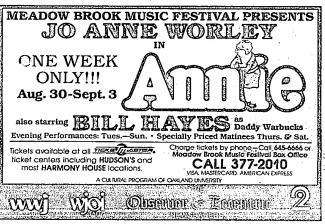

"Vietnam taught me to question everything. I had been taught 'thou shall not kill' and over there it was supposed to be OK to kill because it was for your country."

The comedian trained in several comedy workshops including The Camedy Store Werkshop. A master of dialects, be can do improvisations in Cajun, black, cockney, French, Arabic, Italian, Japanese, red neck, southern, Australian, Bronx, and more.

Blake has a long list of credits from the past nine years including television appearances on National Lampoon's Hot Flashes, Remington Steele, George Carlin's HBO Special: WAYS'HF, Johney Carson Show, David Letterman, Merv Griffin, and others.

David Letterman, Merv Griflin, and others.
Ask him who he is and Blake Clark will tell you: "American by birth and southern by the grace of God.
