Questions should be sent to the Community Commission on Drug Abuse, P.O. Box Drugs, Livonia, Mich. 48151.

Q. What are the psychological effects of marijuana?

D.S., Livonia

A. The psychological effects of marijuana are variable. They include distortions of hearing, vision and sense of time. Thought becomes dream-like. The belief that one is thinking better is not unusual.

Performance may be hampered or unchanged. Illusions (misinterpretation of sensations) are often reported, but hallucination (experiencing non-existent sensations) and delusions (false beliefs) are rare.

Unfounded suspicion may occur, and this may be accompanied by anxiety. More often the feeling is one of a passive euphoria or "high." The individual tends to withdraw into himself. Occasionally, uncontrollable laughter or crying may occur.

What kinds of emotional problems can the marijuana user have?

A.L., Westland

A. Anxiety reactions and panic states have been noted. Accidents have occurred due to impaired judgment and time-space distortions. The user, especially if he is inexperienced, may become excessively suspicious of people and take action that leads to injury.

A toxic psychosis consisting of mental confusion, loss of contact with reality, and memory disturbances has been recorded. The effects of prolonged use are not scientifically known.

In those countries where cannabis use has been traditional, excessive amounts are claimed to induce loss of motivation, apathy, memory difficulties and loss of mental acuity.

Reports of psychotic breakdowns from the extended use of marijuana are frequently found in the medical literature of the Near and Middle East, but these require further scientific investigation.

Q. Does the heavy use of marijuana affect the personality development of the young person?

K.S., LIVONIA

A. It can. By making marijuana use a career, the young person avoids normal life stresses and the problems that are an intrinsic part of growing up.

He therefore misses the opportunity to mature to his full physical and mental potential. In addition, the developing personality is known to be susceptible to the effects of all mind-altering substances.
