Federal money OK'd for Haggerty Connector

Mile, 15 Mile and Pontiac Trail. The proposal follows three years of study by the Michigan Department of Transportation, which has selected this as the preferred plan. Construction would start in Novi, with the building of the interchange, and would likely take 4-5 years, according to MDOT officials.

The state received both support and opposition to the plan from residents, some of whom are concerned about wetlands in Novi and Commerce through which the connector road would be built.

The Interstate Discretionary Fund is made up of money previously earmarked for state projects, but unspent. MDOT made the request for federal money late in November.

Ethnic dance

Students in Pat Tompkin's Farmington High humanities class tried a bit of Greek folk dancing this month, led by Gabriel Richard High senior Dennis Pantazatos. The demonstration, done in a new all-purpose room off the high school media center, was part of the hands-on Humanities program implemented in the district this year. Students had recently studied Greek culture.

Kids look musically at dinosaurs

Second graders at Longacre Elementary in Farmington performed a musical production about dinosaurs Dec. 8, integrating a variety of study areas.

Science, reading, math, spelling, art and music all came into play as students prepared for the production which was performed for parents, other students and teachers.

The central focus on stage was a five-foot high, 10-foot long paper-mache brontosaurus constructed by students from Kelly Fischer's room with the help of art teacher Diane Russell. Students also created other stage sets.

Vocal music instructor Virginia

Biehl directed the musical production. Working hard behind the scenes were classroom teachers including Fischer, Lovee Mikel, Sandie Strauss and Nancy McCoy. Special guests at the assembly included school board president Helen Protow, assistant superintendent Lynn Nutter and a standing-room-only crowd of parents.
