

Pupils' work is published

The work of two fourth graders from Forest Elementary School in Farmington Hills will appear in Shoe Tree, a magazine published by the National Association for Young Writers Inc.

An illustration by Laura Martin and a foreign language story by Japanese student Yuriko Kunieda will appear in the magazine's April edition.

Drawings done by Martin, Stacey Robbins, Jodi Siskind and Rachel Scheinfeld were submitted through the efforts of their teacher, Dottie Harris.

WITH THE assistance of language arts coordinator John Barrett, she found Shoe Tree, a magazine that won the Parents' Choice Award for 1989. Shoe Tree was not only looking for children to illustrate other children's stories, but also for good foreign language stories.

The magazine responded in less than a week. All four of the student illustrators were asked to submit drawings for another child's story to be published in April, knowing only one would be chosen.

Harris and her class eagerly await the April edition.

"We're excited to see Yuriko's foreign language story receive national attention," Harris said. "This has been a wonderful experience. I know I have made five young ladies feel good about themselves and that makes all my efforts worthwhile."
