

Community groups plan Earth Day programs

Several Oakland County school districts and community groups, including Farmington Public Schools, are to sponsor an ambitious, three-day program to commemorate Earth Day and focus on pressing environmental issues.

For Earth Day's 20th anniversary, local community education and business organizations are sponsoring "Facets of the Future," a program at Cranbrook Institute of Science, Oakland Community College-Orchard Ridge Campus, and in various buildings at the Farmington and Birmingham school districts. The program will begin on Earth Day which falls this year on Sunday, April 21.

"We believe all the children, high school students, the business community and adults in general will find the program of interest as we look into the future," said Stephen

Kerschner, director of the Baldwin and Bloomfield Township public libraries, who chairs the economic and technological issues committee for the program.

Earth Day began in 1970 as a grass-roots effort to draw people's attention toward appreciating the Earth and taking care of it. That year, it was a day of demonstrations, forums and lectures in small towns, on college campuses and in the nation's capitol.

PAM O'MALLEY, director of the Farmington district's School/Community Relations Department, said the district will likely encourage participation in Earth Day events, especially those within the district and at nearby Orchard Ridge campus of OCC.

"Each of the three days is different," said Janet Johnson, education coordinator at Cranbrook Institute of Science, "but the whole is appealing to groups of all ages. Some is quite serious, and some is quiet fun."

She said the first day, for adults only, is a way to celebrate the Earth with a fresh approach. It's called Earth Day's Eve, featuring ecologically sound snacks, art from nature and a laser show at Cranbrook. Cost is $15.

Highlighting the second day will be a NASA presentation by Richard Underwood, who will show photographs taken from outer space displaying damage done to the planet. Underwood is scheduled to visit students in the various districts, and will likely involve middle school students in Farmington, said O'Malley.

The third day, Johnson said, is for the more serious audiences. A day-long seminar at OCC's Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills will focus on the future of business, technology and the environment at a cost of $15, which includes lunch, of $7 for students.
