The project involves widening 12 Mile to a five-lane highway between Farmington Road and Bunker Hill and a four-lane boolevard from Bunker Hill to 800 feet west of Drake Road.

The city's $1.55 million share of the cost will be paid through bonding. It covers construction and landscaning.

Construction is targeted to begin in May, Bid opening is April 11.
Widening is necessary to ease connection to the planned Haggerty Road connector.

Paper of record — The Farm-ington Observer was named Farm-ington Hills' official newspaper of the city for legal notices in the wake of the Farmington Forum's cease of operations March 5, city clerk Ka-thryn Dornan reported.

• Notable stats — At last week's State of the Cities breakfast, city manager Bill Costick pointed to sev-eral statistics that underscored his belief Farmington Hills was among the state's top growth communities. From 1985-89, the city issued per-mits for 2.510 single-family homes, 4,619 multiple-family units, 147 off-ice buildings and 50 industrial build-ings.

lec buildings and so industrial build-ligs.
"We had a tremendous amount of construction. That goes without say-ing." Costick said.
He expects the city's population to climb from 58,000 in 1980 to 74,000 in 1990.

• FARMINGTON
• Project delay — a portion of the widening of Orchard Lake Road may be delayed, according to information from Farmington city manamation from Farmington city manager Robert Deadman.

An environmental assessment apparently has slowed up improvement plans in the Orchard Lake Road/Grand River area, Deadman said at last week's State of the Cities breakfast. "The land probably won't be purchased this year."
Drainage and road improvements may progress this fall, however, on a stretch from Shiawassee north to 10 Mile in the City, he said.
The road widening has been eyed for 20 years.
